TRUMP TO SIGN ENERGY EXECUTIVE ORDERS

1 President Donald Trump will sign several executive orders on energy on Friday, a White House official said on Sunday. "This builds on previous executive actions that have cleared the way for job-creating pipelines, innovations in energy production, and reduced unnecessary burden on energy producers," the official said on condition of anonymity. Trump in March signed an executive order to undo Obama-era climate change regulations, keeping a campaign promise to support the coal industry and calling into question U.S. support for the 2015 Paris climate change accord to fight global warming. That order's main target is former President Barack Obama's Clean Power Plan, which required states to slash carbon emissions from power plants. REUTERS

NORTH KOREA SAYS IT'S READY TO STRIKE US SHIP

2 North Korea said it was ready to sink a U.S. aircraft carrier to demonstrate its military might, as two Japanese navy ships joined a U.S. carrier group for exercises in the western Pacific. President Donald Trump ordered the USS Carl Vinson carrier strike group to sail to waters off the Korean peninsula in response to rising tension over the North's nuclear and missile tests, and its threats to attack the United States and its Asian allies. Vice President Mike Pence said on Saturday it would arrive "within days" but gave no other details. North Korea remained defiant. "Our revolutionary forces are combat-ready to sink a U.S. nuclear-powered aircraft carrier with a single strike," the Rodong Sinmun, the newspaper of the North's ruling Workers' Party, said in a commentary. REUTERS

TV JOURNALIST CLAIMS AILES HARASSED HER

3 Television journalist Alisyn Camerota said on Sunday she was a target of sexual harassment by Roger Ailes when she worked at Fox News, joining other former colleagues at the cable channel who have accused their ex-boss of inappropriate behavior. Camerota, now co-host of CNN's "New Day," told that network's Brian Stelter in an interview that Ailes suggested they might have to get to "know each other better" at a hotel if she wanted to succeed at Fox News. REUTERS

4 Centrist Emmanuel Macron took a big step toward the French presidency on Sunday by winning the first round of voting and qualifying for the May 7 runoff alongside far-right leader Marine Le Pen. Though Macron, 39, is a comparative political novice who has never held elected office, new opinion polls on Sunday had him easily winning the final clash against the 48-year-old Le Pen. Sunday's outcome is a huge defeat for the two center-right and center-left groupings that have dominated French politics for 60 years. ## AIRLINES APOLOGIZES FOR CLASH OVER STROLLER

5 American Airlines apologized to a passenger and suspended an employee after a video showing an onboard clash over a baby stroller went viral, in the latest embarrassment for a U.S. carrier over how it treated a customer. The clip, posted on Facebook on Friday by a bystander aboard the flight, shows a woman in tears with a young child in her arms, and a man emerging from his seat to confront a male flight attendant who apparently wrested the stroller from the woman. Facebook user Surain Adyanthaya, who posted the video, wrote that the flight attendant had forcefully taken the stroller, hitting the woman with it and just missing her child. That sequence of events did not appear on the clip. What it shows is the unidentified man standing up and yelling at the flight attendant: "You do that to me and I'll knock you flat." REUTERS

Students sent packing, with food for spring break

Cambridge Weekend Backpack Program helps families whose children depend on school meals.

@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Spring break should be a carefree time for children, but for many, those days spent away from their public schools can mean days spent hungry.

Nationwide, nearly one in six children live in households that struggle to put food on the table.

The need is equally pressing in Cambridge, where a nonprofit organization has been filling students' backpacks with food for the weekends and holidays.

The group, Food for Free, provided 500 public school students with four days' worth of food and drinks last week through its Cambridge Weekend Backpack Program.

The provisions included fresh fruit, vegetables, milk, healthy snacks and breakfast foods. They were all slipped into backpacks before the weeklong break that just ended.

Alanna Mallon founded the program in 2013, before joining Food for Free, where she is now program director. Based in Cambridge, Food for Free collects fresh food that would otherwise be discarded and distributes it to those in need. The backpack program provides food for children over the weekends and holiday breaks, filling the gaps during the time when kids don't have access to a school cafeteria. It has been such a success that Mallon is now setting her sights on incorporating it into the far larger Boston Public Schools.

Her program started with 15 students. It now feeds about 500 kids from all 16 schools in the Cambridge district.

From the beginning, the results were immediate and obvious, Mallon said. Children who had been withdrawn showed more energy and began participating in class more, she said. Trips to the principal's and nurse's office became less frequent and teachers reported that the students who benefited from the program were more alert and less anxious on Fridays and Mondays.

TRUMP'S AMERICA

97, 98, 99 ... DUCKING '100 DAYS'

ELLIS HENICAN
@henican

Can you count to 100?

On second thought, maybe you shouldn't even try. Donald Trump has already taken to Twitter to pooh-poo the "ridiculous standard" of even asking what a new president has accomplished in his first 100 days.

That particular tweet was a bit confusing. On the campaign trail and for most of his time in office, Trump was constantly bragging about how much he would get done in those first three-plus months. But with the deadline dropping on Saturday and the tallies coming in uncomfortably short, the president has had a sudden change of heart.

"No matter how much I accomplish during the ridiculous standard of the first 100 days, & it has been a lot (including S.C.), media will kill!" his tweet reads in full.

But forget the media for a moment. What do the facts say?

They say that, of all

President Donald Trump tweeted that he accomplished "a lot" in his first 100 days. GETTY IMAGES his many big campaign promises, Trump can reasonably take credit for achieving exactly one: Neil Gorsuch is now safely on the U.S. Supreme Court and already ushering death-row inmates to the Arkansas lethal-injection chamber. You might or might not like that sort of thing. But thanks to a last-minute rule change, it's undeniably a victory for Trump.

Beyond that? Well, there's not so much to show.

His signature immigration ban is blocked by a federal judge "sitting on an island in the Pacific." His vow to "repeal and replace" Obamacare was run off the road in Congress. His promise of a border wall that Mexico will pay for has gone precisely nowhere. His hard line on "currency manipulator" China has visibly softened. His vow to stay out of foreign entanglements has been contradicted by missiles in Syria, the mother of all bombs in Afghanistan and talk of nuclear exchanges with North Korea.

Bladder Pain

urinary urgency, and/or frequency?

a research study for Interstitial Cystitis/ Bladder Pain Syndrome may be right for you

Interstitial cystitis, also known as bladder pain syndrome (IC/BPS), is a bladder disease with symptoms that include, bladder pain, urinary urgency (feeling a strong need to urinate), and urinary frequency (having to urinate often).

Living with IC/BPS can be challenging. There is currently no cure for IC/BPS, and effective treatment options are limited.

The LEADERSHIP

301 Trial is a clinical research study evaluating an investigational drug to see if it will reduce the bladder pain of IC/BPS and relieve other symptoms such as urinary frequency. The study drug is a new type of medication that may help reduce inflammation in the bladder.

You may qualify if you:

- Are between the ages of 18 and 80
- Have been diagnosed with IC/BPS for at least 3-months
- Consistently experience bladder pain and frequent, urgent trips to the bathroom

Qualified participants will receive study drug and all study-related care at no charge.

Katy Perry still loves cultural appropriation

It's nice that we can rely on Katy Perry to deliver some cute and casual appropriation from time to time.

Over the weekend, the 32-year-old — who has repeatedly come under fire for her various forays into appropriation — posted a picture of herself with a new hairstyle. “Katy Kardashian,” she wrote, surely proud of how clever she was. Sites like Just Jared are referring to the hairstyle as “boxer braids,” which is incorrect. Those are two oversized cornrows, a style commonly worn by black women that are apparently now in vogue among celebrities like Perry and Kim Kardashian.

On the one hand, it's like — maybe Katy Perry, like the many stars before her who borrow from black culture in a way to seem cooler — should be able to rock these so-called boxer braids. On the other hand, black women are discouraged from wearing their hair in natural styles such as this one, especially in the workplace where it can often be seen as “unprofessional.”

I suppose there isn't a thing that doesn't inspire Perry. She's an equal opportunist borrower.

Are Mariah Carey & Nick Cannon rekindling their romance?

Mariah Carey and Nick Cannon have been spotted having dinner twice in the last week. And the reason for their frequent reunions just may shock you.

When asked by TMZ why he'd been seeing Carey so frequently lately, Cannon told the paparazzi, “You realize this is my family, right?” Can you believe it?!

According to Us Weekly, Carey, 47 and Cannon, 36, headed to Mr. Chow with their twins late last week, and enjoyed a private dinner without their children at Nobu Malibu the next day.

The two have been haunted by dating rumors ever since Carey broke it off with her possibly fake boyfriend, Bryan Tanaka. The 34-year-old and the pop diva split after five months, which is remarkably long for a rebound relationship, if you think about it. The possibly fake stories surrounding the breakup said that Tanaka's jealousy over Carey and Cannon's relationship was to blame.

To be fair, these are two grown adults who really love attention: When a TMZ reporter asked Cannon whether or not the two were now “official,” Cannon said “We've always been official.” Meanwhile, Carey is in the background basking in the glow of the numerous camera flashes and jokingly threatening to steal a paparazzo's car. So this is just pretty standard behavior from them.

I don't know. I kind of feel like these two deserve each other, no?

Mindy Kaling hasn't gone to Newark, yet

Remember when Cory Booker very earnestly, very thirstily asked Mindy Kaling out on a date over Twitter? That was a month ago. Now, despite what we all witnessed with our own eyes, Booker is now playing this off like there was nothing romantic about his intentions. “Well first of all, don't read too into it about ‘asking out,’” Booker told Vanity Fair. “I want to sort of take the romantic aspect out of it and talk more about how she's amazing ... We'll see what happens in the future.”

What I am inferring from this statement is that Kaling is too busy and or not actually interested in Booker and he has made it his life goal to get her over to New Jersey so he can show her that he just really, really cares about her. And he'll never give up.

Kaling — make sure you put him down easy, OK?

Chris Pratt appears to be confused

Sure, Chris Pratt charmed the pants off of us in “Parks and Recreation,” but now he's just a big star that says not great things sometimes.

In an interview with Men's Fitness, the 37-year-old complained that stories like his just aren't being told. “I don't see personal stories that necessarily resonate with me, because they're not my stories,” he told the magazine. “The voice of the average, blue-collar American isn't necessarily represented in Hollywood.” Ex-squeeze me?

After Marie Claire pointed out that Pratt's comments were less than ideal, he responded via Twitter: “That was actually a pretty stupid thing to say. I'll own that.”

Let's cheers to his improbable progression to being woke.

The pains of being beautiful

Former "Charlie's Angel" Cheryl Ladd talks "Unforgettable" and cherishing her age.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Cheryl Ladd is happy she's in her 60s.

When the "People vs. O.J. Simpson" actress first hit the big time, it was for playing Kris Munroe on "Charlie's Angels." Controversially, she had replaced Farah Fawcett, and she was thought of mainly for her looks. Cut to four decades later and she's getting more interesting roles — like Katherine Heigl's manipulative, domineering mother in the new thriller "Unforgettable."

The actress says she's not a lot like her character. She tried to shield her own daughter, Jordan, from the limelight, because it wasn't her choice to be a public figure. (She's since become an actress anyway, appearing in "Cabin Fever" and Quentin Tarantino's "Death Proof.")

Ladd's "Unforgettable" character, meanwhile, demands Heigl have a great job, be a great mother, and be flawlessly refined in her looks and manners. (She has a daughter as well as a stepdaughter.) It's driven her crazy — which is partially why she flips out on her ex-husband's new fiancée (Rosario Dawson) and tries to make her life hell.

"You really get this sense of this perfectionism women have," Ladd tells us. "We're supposed to have all of these things [like beauty, exquisite clothes and social graces] lined up like little ducks. It doesn't leave a lot of room for your true humanity."

Society may be getting cooler to the idea of gender equality, but the flipside is that women now have more on their plate. Men certainly don't have to do nearly as much. They don't have to be great dads, and sometimes it doesn't matter what they look like. (Our president definitely isn't a looker.)

"It takes them 10 minutes to look good," Ladd says. "They shower, they shave,

Having fun these days

Nowadays, Ladd has an easier and more fulfilling time acting.

"I'm enjoying my process now more than I did when I was younger," she says. "When you're younger, you have to worry about being beautiful all the time, and that is just tiresome. I don't have to do any of those things now. I can just be a character, whether it's a grandmother on the prairie or this very put-together woman. When you have a lot of life under your belt, there's more to bring to the characters. I'm enjoying it. I say 'no' a lot. I'm pretty picky and choosy these days."

they put on a nice outfit, they brush their teeth, and off they go. Is that fair?

"All little girls want to play dress up. But to do it all over again, day after day after day, it gets ... tired. That's why I like going to the supermarket with a ponytail, blue jeans and sneakers. I'm just this person. It's a nice way to live."

Still, things are dramatically different than when she came into the spotlight in the '70s.

"It's changed enormously," Ladd says. "Charlie's Angels" may have been about attractive women, but they were also very strong and independent. That wasn't seen a lot in those days. "We kind of broke the mold for acceptable jobs for women at that time," Ladd says.

"I wasn't that long ago that women were supposed to be teachers and nurses and secretaries."

It's not only about reviewing.

Advanced-placement exams begin early May, which means for many students, test-day panic has already sunk in.

Between the length of the exam, the range of material covered, and the fact that doing well can earn students college credit, the pressure is truly on. But instead of worrying, students should be preparing.

We spoke with Stacy Caldwell of the The Princeton Review for some tips to take on the test with confidence.

Set the pace

Understanding the structure of the exam, and mapping out a pace to tackle the questions is a great way to do well on the APs, says Caldwell.

Students should begin by looking at the number of questions and calculating the speed at which they should be working, she explains. The AP human-geography exam, for example, gives students one hour to complete 75 multiple-choice questions. That means they need to recognize that they have about 48 seconds per question.

"If there's a question and you've been working on it for a minute and a half, you're going to have far less time on another question," says Caldwell. Timing is the No. 1 concern, she stresses. "Students should always make sure they're working through sections at the speed they need to be."

Test yourself

One of the best ways to prepare for exam day is by completing practice questions, says Caldwell. "This helps students understand areas where they're strong, and where they may need to provide some more focus," she explains.

And while practice questions certainly help, completing a full, timed practice exam is ideal. Not only does it allow students to grasp the exam experience, but it also helps them get their pacing down.

Of course, both methods work because they each give students the most valuable thing they can take into the exam with them: familiarity. At the end of the day, says Caldwell, "understanding the types of questions they'll see will ultimately give them confidence that they'll be able to successfully answer them."

Order is key

Because there's no specific order that students need to follow when taking an AP exam, "the questions that look easier should be the first ones that students tackle," says Caldwell. This is particularly important for the free responses. "Students should quickly scan through all of the free response questions and choose the order that they want to answer them, so that way they're answering the ones that they're most confident in first," says Caldwell. "That gives them more time for the difficult ones at the end."

Read carefully

While working at a fast pace is crucial during the AP exam, students should take the time to read each question carefully. In other words: They should never sacrifice comprehension for the sake of speed. Instead, they should fully understand each question before they answer it.

By speeding through, "you could end up solving an equation and you will have had the wrong answer because the question was actually looking for something slightly different," she says. "Reading carefully enough to understand what the question is asking tends to save you time in the long run."

JOBS OF THE FUTURE

What is a podiatrist?

LEARN ABOUT THE TOP CAREERS OF 2017

Learn about the wide range of roles in this specialty.

SARA FEINSTEIN
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Not everyone with the desire to heal patients wants to go to medical school. While podiatry school is certainly no cakewalk, its narrowed focus is attractive to prospective doctors; it's a growing field with abundant jobs, and one that can offer a coveted work-life balance that might not be available to, say, an emergency-medicine specialist.

We spoke to Dr. Dyane Tower, a practicing podiatrist and director of clinical affairs at the American Podiatric Medical Association, to find out more about the field.

What does a podiatrist do?

A podiatrist is a physician who diagnoses and treats conditions of the foot, ankle and sometimes portions of the lower leg.

"They see anything from newborns with deformities like clubfoot all the way up to people towards the end of their life who need help taking care of their feet," Tower says.

On a given day, a podiatrist might prescribe orthotic shoes for diabetic patients, treat injuries from sports or activities or even do something as simple as trim toenails.

What schooling do you need?

After completing an undergraduate degree, prospective podiatrists should begin by applying to any of the nine four-year podiatric medical schools in the country, says Tower.

Once they've earned their doctor of podiatric medicine (DPM) degree, the next step is to complete a residency-training program.

"These are typically three years long, and teach students how to do any kind of surgical procedure that you could ever imagine needing to do on somebody's foot, ankle or lower leg," Tower says.

Training doesn't end

there. Many students go on to complete one-year fellowships in a specialized field. "Maybe they're interested in sports medicine, and go work in an area where for that year they're seeing only athletic injuries," says Tower. "There are opportunities in trauma, reconstruction, diabetic limb salvage, any subspecialty within podiatry that you could probably envision—there is a fellowship in that area."

What's the typical salary?

The median annual salary for a podiatrist is $144,110 according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The best-paid earned $182,420 in 2016 while the lowest-paid made $48,830.

Is it hard to find employment?

The need for podiatrists is expected to increase as baby boomers age, says Tower. "With that increase in age comes an increase in things like diabetes, heart disease and vascular disease," she says. "Things of that nature all have an effect on the feet and legs, which makes podiatrists' role in the health-care system very important."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that by 2024, podiatry jobs are on track to grow 14 percent from 2014, resulting in 1,400 new jobs.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that by 2024, podiatry jobs are on track to grow 14 percent from 2014, resulting in 1,400 new jobs.

The pros

One of the great things about this profession is the variety of patients and conditions you get to treat in a single day, says Tower. "You might see somebody for a skin problem in the morning, and later that evening be treating an athlete with an overuse injury and thinking about the biomechanics behind their functioning and the structure of their foot," she says. "It's really nice to be able to use the breadth of information that we learn throughout our careers all at the same time."

There's also the satisfaction that comes with being able to alleviate patients' pain. Whether they receive an immediate injection or leave the office with an insert, "knowing that I was able to do something to make them feel better is always extremely gratifying," she says.

The cons

Prospective podiatrists should consider the high cost of education, says Tower.

And while taking out loans to pay for medical school isn't always ideal, being able to take care of patients and see the appreciation they show in return certainly is, she says. In the end, Tower says, "it's worth going through the process to be able to be part of such a great profession."

Dominic Moore reacts after the Senators ended the Bruins' season Sunday at TD Garden. GETTY IMAGES

Bruins' season comes to abrupt end

The B's improved overall this season, but there's a mountain of work to be done this summer.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

The Bruins took a baby step forward this season, making the playoffs for the first time in three years. But some harsh reality hit them in the face Sunday at TD Garden.

The B's are still far from a legit Cup contender, and that was made clear in Ottawa's 4-2 first round series win. Ottawa advances to face the New York Rangers in the second round as it dumped the Bruins in overtime of Game 6, 3-2.

David Pattnak was called for a holding penalty just five minutes and 54 seconds into OT, and 36 seconds later Ottawa's Clarke MacArthur ended the Bruins' season on a play set up by Derick Brassard.

The Bruins led early in Game 6, but a pair of second period goals by the Senators changed the entire complexion of the contest.

On a power play, Bobby Ryan took advantage when Zdeno Chara inadvertently screened Tuukka Rask. Ryan, who was all over the ice for the Sens in the series, popped one past Rask and five minutes later Kyle Turris also beat the B's netminder. Drew Stafford could not clear the puck on the play, and Turris ended up with a wide open look.

The B's did show fight throughout the series and in Sunday afternoon's abrupt season finale. Boston killed off three straight penalties before a first period goal by Stafford, in which he and Charlie McAvoy showed great patience with the puck.

The B's scored their second goal of the game in the third period by

OT madness

The Bruins-Senators series was as nip and tuck as it can get as four out of the six games in the first round Stanley Cup playoff series went to overtime. The other two games in the series were both decided by goals in the third quarter.

Across the NHL, 17 first round games have gone to overtime this year — which ties a league record.

taking advantage of a lazy change by Ottawa. Patrice Bergeron was right in front of Ottawa goaltender Craig Anderson to clean up a Brad Marchand shot.

Anderson made 28 saves in Game 6 while Rask made 26.

Missing Krejci

The Bruins played Game 6 without center David Krejci, who was hit on the knee on a leg check by Ottawa defenseman Chris Wideman in Game 5 on Friday night.

The Bruins were clearly irked by Wideman's hit, which was not penalized.

"Right after [the hit], Wideman chirped him right away," Brad Marchand told WEEI.com. "It's just pretty classless to do something like that when you know you hurt a guy on the ice. Krejci is a pretty tough player, he can play through just about anything. But I guess that's part of the game. It happens a lot out there."

The Bruins missed Krejci, who scored 23 goals and had 31 assists during the regular season.

Interesting offseason

The Bruins caught plenty of flak for firing Claude Julien during the Patriots' Super Bowl parade, but most B's fans would agree it was ultimately the right decision. The Bruins went 18-8 down the stretch of the regular season under interim head coach Bruce Cassidy and were very competitive during the Ottawa series (four of the six games went to overtime).

Bruins management must now decide whether or not to remove Cassidy's interim tag.

REMEMBER COLLEGE SPORTS?

Believe it or not, college sports used to matter in this town ... ya know, before Boston's pro teams started dominating everything in sight.

ESPN ran a "30 for 30" on John Calipari earlier this month and it was striking how different the sports landscape in Boston was 20-plus years ago. UMass-Amherst, which is an hour and 45 minutes away from Boston, was the center of the New England sports universe for a few years back then. Calipari's Minutemen were ranked No. 1 in the country and every nationally televised UMass hoops game was an event.

Boston College football also used to have this sort of mainstream buzz as it got the attention of Boston sports fans who had never even stepped foot onto the Chestnut Hill campus.

I wrote a critical piece on former BC athletic director Gene DeFilippo and BC athletics in March of 2012 because the football and men's basketball programs had slipped dramatically. DeFilippo resigned shortly after.

Turns out, the DeFilippo era was an absolute glory period compared to what (or what's not) taking place at The Heights these days.

It's hilarious to watch the fan bases of other teams get all geeked up about the NFL draft, which takes place later this week. As if it's going to make a difference.

We all know the Patriots are winning the AFC again this year and we won't see any real competition again until the Super Bowl next February.

Yup, we've become as jaded as Bill Belichick is. We know that first-round picks are overrated and the real gold doesn't come until Day 2. Value, baby.

The Patriots do not have a first-round pick or a second-round pick in this year's draft as of right now (their first pick is No. 72 overall). In other words, they don't even have a first-round pick right now to trade away for a second- and two fifth-rounders. The horror.

It's possible that the Pats will trade Malcolm Butler to the Saints in order to get their No. 32 pick back (which they gave up in the Brandin Cooks deal), but don't hold your breath.

After an unusually frantic free agency period, Belichick will want to make this week as boring as Ernie Adams delivering a high school graduation speech. Can't have too much excitement in these non-football playing months.

Dustin Pedroia is the most underrated quote machine in Boston sports history, as every few years the Sox' second baseman comes up with an all-timer.

Seven years ago when being questioned about the early struggles of David Ortiz, Pedroia had this to say:

"A couple years ago I had 60 at-bats and I was hitting .170 and everyone was ready to kill me too, but what happened? ... Laser show."

With that, the "Laser

Show" era was born.

A year later, "Muddy Chicken" was born.

Pedroia's latest gem won't fit on a T-shirt, but it is equally strong. When being questioned about the rule regarding players sliding into second base — following the nasty slide by Manny Machado this past Friday — cocky Pedroia showed up.

"I don't even know what the rule is," Pedroia said. "I mean, I've turned the best double play in the major leagues for 11 years, I don't need a f—ing rule. The rule's irrelevant. The rule's for people with bad footwork."
